

VENGEANCE IS SWEET! This year the Engineers will sit back and watch as their rivals, Arts, Science and Commerce wash the steps of the Engineering Building.

ENGINEERS AFTER 'LOSERS' BLOOD

Following their victory in the blood drive, EUS issued the following statement:

"The Engineering Undergraduate Society hereby calls for the losing Undergraduate Societies to carry out the penalties as stated in the Engineer's Blood Drive challenge on the front steps of the Engineering building to-day, Tuesday, Nov. 2 at 1 pm.

I would like to take this opportunity to express the appreciation of the E.U.S. executive for the terrific support the Engineering students gave to the Blood Drive this year. The first three years were particularly outstanding in helping to set a new faculty record where every second Engineer at McGill donated a pint of blood.

The Engineers would also like to congratulate the Blood Drive Committee for their outstanding contribution in setting a new record in the 1954 Blood Drive, a record of which the Committee and the entire college can be justly proud."

Bill Hayes,
President E.U.S.

While the whole campus will be watching the executives of the three losing faculties sweep the steps of the Engineering Building, the disappearance of "Bloody Mary" still remains an unsolved mystery. Who were the criminals?

PLAYERS' CLUB WILL STAGE IBSEN CLASSIC

The McGill Players' Club will present Henrik Ibsen's tragedy "Hedda Gabler" as their major arena production for the season.

When first produced at the end of the last century, it was regarded as sensational and daring; but in recent times it has become one of the classics of modern theatre.

The Plot

The plot centres around a woman, who seeking for power to satiate her overwhelming desire to create for good or evil, destroys not only the people over whom she wields her influence, but also herself. Through her Ibsen shows the tragedy which results when a woman of his era tries to compete in the world outside the home.

Norma Springford

Norma Springford of the Mountain Playhouse is directing the cast of seven, which feature Helga von Eicken in the title role. As well as being the producer at Montreal's well known summer-stock theatre, Norma Springford is a noted expert in the technique of Theatre-in-the-round.

Fifth of Series

This will be her fifth arena production at McGill in a series which began so successfully with another Ibsen classic: "Ghosts", several years ago. Also featured in the play along with Helga von Eicken, are Neil Madden, and Hisham Nashabi in the leading male roles.

Others included in the cast are Gerda Rother, Peter Engel,

SCOPE FEATURES DR. MANNING AS UKRAINIAN WEEK SPEAKER

"Ukrainian Week" at McGill will feature as speaker Professor Clarence A. Manning of Columbia University, tonight at 8 pm in the Union. Professor Manning's public lecture will be titled "The Struggle Against Moscow" and will coincide with the program of activities organized by the Ukrainian Students' Club and sponsored by SCOPE, for the week of November first through seventh.

Professor Manning is Professor of Russian and Ukrainian languages at Columbia University, and author of many books, among which are the "History of the Ukraine" and "Ukraine under the Soviets." His studies in the field of Slavonic affairs have been long and extensive, especially concerning the subjects of history and life under Soviet rule.

Although his subject is an intricate and comprehensive one,

There will be a meeting of all Daily staffers Thursday November 4 at 1 pm in the Union.

The business will include a revision of the constitution of The Daily, and all staff members are asked to be present.

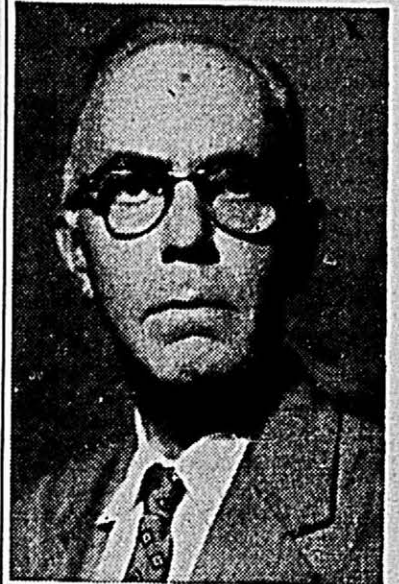

Professor Manning's numerous books have been written in a popular style, and have been received with great enthusiasm by their readers.

His translations of Taras Shevchenko's poems are considered to be one of the best literary publications in the English language dealing with Slavic literature.

The guest speaker's scope of interest has reached beyond his study of the Ukraine. During World War I he served in the United States Intelligence Service. He has been honored with seven decorations from various Slavic nations, including the title of The Order of Crown of Yugoslavia and The Grand Prince Gediminas of Lithuania. The Professor has been connected with the Department of Slavic languages since 1917 and is now Associate Professor at Columbia, where he received his Ph.D. in 1915.

Following Professor Manning's

Dr. C. A. Manning

speech, Dr. F. Cyril James, Principal, will be host to an informal gathering of members of the staff of the Ukrainian Club and the student body in the Union Lounge. At this time Professor Manning will answer the questions of press and radio representatives.

Choral Society's 1st Supper Party To-morrow Night

The Choral Society's first supper party of the year will be held on Wednesday evening after the regular practice. Refreshments will be served and there will be dancing afterwards.

The Society will present its annual "Sing at Christmas" concert on Saturday, December 18 in the Sir Arthur Currie Gymnasium, under the direction of Gifford Mitchell and accompanied by Miss Doris Killam. The Christmas story will be sung and the audience will be invited to participate in some of the old traditional carols. The finale will be "Grandmother's Christmas".

Tickets for the concert will be available next week.

Conference On Plant Physiology Held Here

The first part of the Fifth Annual Research Conference on Plant Physiology was held yesterday in the Biology Building.

Over seventy delegates, from different Canadian universities and agricultural institutes, are attending the two day convention, the purpose of which is to discuss and exchange up to date information on experiments conducted in different parts of the country.

Sunday evening, an informal get-together at the home of Dr. Towers served as an introduction to the event. The official welcome was extended by Professor Roscoe at 9 am yesterday; after which speeches and discussions followed all day, with luncheon held at the Royal Victoria College.

Some of the subjects taken up ranged from photo-oxidation of manganese in fluorescent solutions to lignin biosynthesis from labelled aromatic and related compounds. One speaker dealt with the phasic physiology as primary factor in legume root rot, another one with the survival of maturing apple tissues in culture.

Dean D. L. Thompson of McGill, and Dean Abel Gauthier of the University of Montreal were the speakers last night at a banquet sponsored by the Faculty Club in honour of the delegates. Following this, a Business Meeting was held at 9 pm in the Biology Building.

Dr. Allen Depicts Communist China

By Ruth Roskies

Dr. Stuart Allen, for 22 years a resident of China, addressed the United Nations Club on Friday on the topic, "Communist China as I Saw It". Dr. Allen was Superintendent and chief surgeon of a Chinese hospital until he was brought before a communist board of inquiry and sentenced to 8 months in prison.

Brain Washing

While undergoing an interrogation and "brain-washing" operation, Dr. Allen made several observations of his captors. He remembers an investigator stating that "the only reason for sending diplomatic embassies to other countries is for espionage and spying". Moreover, the accepted policy towards China's neighbours was to liberate them from imperialistic influence by force of arms.

He pointed out that if we accepted Red China into the UN, we would have to accept this situation, as it exists. He doubted the fact that Red China, in view of the Communist aim of building a World Communism, would accept her true responsibilities as a member of the United Nations.

Religion

Dr. Allen said that although the Communists tolerate religion, they fervently hope that some day the church will be replaced by the Communist doctrine. Any religious activity must be confined to the house of worship only.

Discussion Period

A provocative discussion period followed the brief talk. Dr. Allen traced the rise of feeling against Chiang's government before the Communists took over, and he indicated that the government has at last begun making some long-needed improvements. He declined to comment on whether or not the Nationalist government would ever be able to reaffirm its position.

Current Affairs Club Plans Future Events

The Current Affairs Club, which is the newest organization on the Campus, held its initial meeting at 1 pm, Friday, in the Union.

President Bill Rogg, in a brief reading of the constitution, noted that the main objective of the club is to discuss current affairs, and to hold symposiums with speakers of high calibre.

Membership in the club is open to all undergraduate members of the University and there are no membership fees charged. In view of the fact that no specific day has been set aside for meetings, a notice shall be given three days in advance.

It was decided at the meeting to invite among the speakers of the coming season Mayor Drapeau or former Chief Langlois, to speak on the vice probe, and the editor of the Star.

OUR CORRESPONDENTS

We like to get letters to the editor.

Letters to the editor show that students are reading the Daily and are getting worked up about its contents.

Besides, the more such letters we receive the more we are saved from writing the whole editorial page ourselves. Sometimes, when an issue of lively controversy is raging, we can easily keep the "Letters" column filled for two weeks or more with replies of outraged or dissenting readers to opinions that have been expressed by the Daily's writers.

There is a limit to the number of students on campus who feel free to express their own opinions in the paper; most students are content to merely read the utterances as they come forth. The campus has come to expect fully as much amusement, if not more, in the "Letters" column as in the rest of the Daily.

Believe us, the Daily's readers do not get half as much amusement reading the letters we print as we get reading the letters we don't print.

Discounting such letters as the one we received recently from the prophet Elijah, outlining the state of God's revelation of the deterioration of England, may we remark briefly on some of the letters sent in by students?

One, bearing the signature "EGO," ended with a private note to the editors which read as follows:

"May I express my embarrassment due to the typing, probable spelling and grammatical errors as. Here at McGill I am without my author-cohort-in-crime. Should this letter receive publication may I now express my gratitude for your having corrected my glaring mistakes in form."

This, we think, is a bit too much. We have enough grammatical problems of our own without being responsible for correcting the spelling mistakes of our random contributors.

There was one letter received last week from a well-known campus figure in which "suggest" was spelled "sujest" and "unfamiliar" was spelled "unfamillure." These we corrected. Nobody would believe it was not our own printing error.

"EGO," by the way, did not sign his name to his letter. Unsigned contributions are never considered for publication. We will gladly supply the writer with any desired pseudonym, as is the custom with almost all of our regular editorial page writers; but we must know his name.

One other thing: some of our readers seem to be unaware of the existence of libel laws. A letter we received yesterday called one of our writers a "pseudo-intellectual, sexually maladjusted young man."

If we printed that we would be sued for all we were worth.

Let's hear from our readers, but please, let us not hear anything asinine.

No more asinine than the stuff we write ourselves, anyway.

LET'S ABOLISH NFCUS

By Alison Knox

Two weeks ago we saw screaming headlines from Toronto about the Annual NFCUS Conference. Unfortunately, one question which was never presented in Toronto, nay, even mentioned, was the most important of all, viz., why not abolish NFCUS entirely? The abolition of NFCUS is clearly the answer to any of its problems; however, as there is a certain amount of vague sentimentality attached to NFCUS, we must prove our case solemnly and logically point by point.

1.) It has been said that we need a voice for Canadian student opinions. This sophistry is easily exposed by the fact that there is no student opinion in Canada: we are too dumb. Can one really expect amoeba to have opinions? Absurd, of course. Furthermore, leading authorities assert that an examination of those persons attending university in Canada indicates that the appellate "student" is unjustified. NFCUS therefore claims to express and act upon the non-existent opinions of non-existents.

2.) Why do we need international representation? When representatives from forty odd national student unions gather every year for the International Students Conference, why does Canada have to be among them? If there were delegates there from Latin America, Africa, and Asia who needed assurance that North America is interested in their problems, who needed to be urged not to be enticed by the attractive offers of the Communist International Union of Students, why could not these trivia be left to the United States representatives? Or, if the Americans were too busy trying to explain that they were not intending to conquer the world, what's wrong with the British chaps for the job? Britain and the U.S. have always handled our foreign policy.

3.) The NFCUS proposal to have a country-wide campaign for more government scholarships and bursaries is absurd. NFCUS enthusiasts can quote figures until they are blue in the face showing that only 6% of Canadian students receive financial aid for their university education while the percentage in Britain is about 70%, but they will never convince Canadian students that anything should be done about it. The practicalities of the matter are enough to defeat the suggestion: if many of the students who cannot now afford university were unable to do so, the universities would be uncomfortably overcrowded. Furthermore, the competition to pass would be intense: we might have to work.

4.) When someone speaks of NFCUS Art and Short Story contests, this writer can only laugh. Presumably, some idea of a nascent Canadian culture is behind this proposal, but dreamers are referred to the report of a certain Royal Commission for documented evidence that there is no Canadian culture. The American market is already saturated with bear-hunting stories, and we have enough tales of trappers and songs of the Eskimo to last for centuries. After all, good art is only that which has been experienced, and what else have we in Canada? If any other aspect of life were artificially expressed, nobody would believe it was Canadian. Anyway, in the last analysis, who wants a Canadian culture? I just love American comic books.

If someone proposes the establishment of the National Federation of Trappers and Eskimos, let us lend it our full support. As for NFCUS, I would rather have for my fifty cents a package of cigarettes, two sticks of gum, and a cup of cold coffee.

Letters to the Editor

The Advertising Of Truth

Dear Sir:

From reading Reg Warner's article "God's Campaign Managers," I have come to the conclusion that what Reg actually desires is a little popularity. He reminds me of the rowdy youth in our society who, surrounded by a large group of preoccupied individuals, will do any sort of obnoxious thing just to attract their attention to himself. He usually does so by touching them on some sensitive spot.

Regardless of how much criticism is forthcoming, or of how much shouting to the contrary, he'll move unswervingly in the same path. Nothing said against him can inflict him mortally, and so he enjoys the commotion he creates. In Reg's case, he has certainly "arrived." Notice how he says he'll "sail into that masterpiece 'God in our Hearts'."

But seriously, though, I think Reg is doing something good. He is causing at least a few persons to question and re-examine their religious thinking. Some, as evidenced by the two letters published, have tried to defend their position through rationalization.

Any person who has taken time to evaluate the condition of our present day churches will agree, I think, that a little too much emphasis is placed on sensationalism. There are reasons for this, of course, but one cannot go into them at present. One will also agree that the mind should be at the helm in life's experiences, and that emotion should be rigidly controlled. Everything, however, cannot be reasoned out, and so one must accept certain premises. Here, I might add, is where faith enters.

Now I would like to ask Reg two questions. He affirms that all churches are "institutions seeking to place a limit on the achievements of reason." He will agree, I think, that the ultimate aim of all reasoning should be to attain truth. Suppose a church, or an institution like McGill, has achieved a certain truth. Isn't it reasonable to assume that this institution will present all available data and point others (the uncovered in the case of the church, as we students in the case of McGill) to the "pre-decided conclusion?" One may not agree with all that is presented as truth, but one will admit that such action is justifiable.

And the other question: How extensive was the sample he took of religions in the world to come to the sweeping generalization that no religion has found God?

Such writers as Reg are sincere at heart, I believe, but let's see if they can exercise their talents just a little more creatively.

E. L. Richardson, B.A. 4

A Question

Dear Sir:

I should like to ask Mr. Warner what, if any, difference he recognizes between religion and philosophy. Is it that religion is only a department of philosophy? Possibly the Department of Applied Philosophy?

Guy Mersereau, B.Sc. 4

Doesn't Exist

Dear Sir:

Mr. Warner states in his article, "God's Campaign Managers", that the path to man's destiny lies through the use of his brain. It may also lie through the disuse or misuse of man's brain. Surely, searching for something which does not exist is misusing man's brain and will not lead him to his destiny.

YMHA TROUNCES POLOISTS 9-3

By Bernier Haber

In a fast and open game last night the power packed Y.M.H.A. squad walloped the Red poloists 9-3. The 'Y' boys proved in no uncertain fashion just why they are this year's Dominion polo champions.

The 'Y' squad is practically unchanged from last year. This was their first game of the season, and despite lack of practice they are shaping up like a red hot team. Their forward line of Goldberg, Kracko and Kastner is fast and accurate and the two Hoffmans in defense look as solid as a brick wall.

The 'Y' opened the scoring in the first quarter with two very snappy goals by Kracko. Redmen tried hard, but they just couldn't get that ball in. In the second quarter the 'Y' boys added two more, with Goldberg and Byers tallying one apiece to lead 4-0.

The third quarter saw the Redmen open up the scoring with a beautiful goal by captain Jack Novick. Kracko snapped right back with two fast goals to make it 6-0.

Sid Kastner tallied two more and Kracko really had himself a field day by getting a fifth. In the closing minutes of the game Novick put one in unassisted and Miroslavic scored on a pass from Toporovsky to make it 9-3.

One of the highlights of the game was the really phenomenal goal tending by Chambray in the third quarter. Only that kept the Y boys from scoring again and again. This boy is really good and he looks like the find of the season. Niroslavic and Novick played well and Rosenberg in defence performed very creditably. Bram Gelfand looked good and with a little more experience this boy will be tops.

Though the locals lost, they put up a very spirited right against the Dominion champs in a good, fast, thrill a minute game. This Wednesday sees Ashton's boys open their Intercity League schedule against Palestre Nationale at 8.30 at the Currie gym.

Light's Boxers Start Training Grind

This year's edition of the Redmen boxing team is rapidly taking shape under the direction of coach Bert Light. In the Intercollegiate championships last year, McGill finished second, one point behind the pugilists from Toronto.

A first year Medical student, John Fawcett, has been elected captain of the team. Fawcett comes from San Francisco University where he was the 140 lb. collegiate champion. Two intercollegiate champions are also returning this year. They are Ossie Downs and Peter Raymond who fight in the 165 and 155 lb. divisions respectively. Joe Priddicombe at 135 lb., Eric Tucker at 155 lb., and Akos Frick, a promising heavyweight, are also counted on to share the load.

This year marks the thirtieth consecutive season that Bert Light will coach the McGill maulers. It was just thirty years ago that Bert won the 147 lb. Dominion boxing crown.

Practice for the boxing team is at 5 pm on Tuesday and Thursday in the Combatives room in the gym. Anyone is welcome to try out for a spot on the team. Novices are also urged to come out and show their potential. Even Marciano started as a novice.
